WONDERFUL ENTERPRISE.

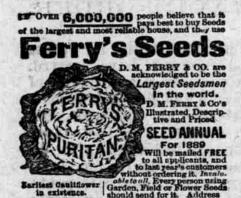

The New York Herald now prints an edition in London, the the first number being issued on Saturday, February 2nd. The total edition, of many thousand copies, was exhausted before 10 o'clock, and the presses were started again, and tens of thousands more were put on the news stands. The British public and the press alike treat the new venture with all kindness and courtesy, and the Herald in return will treat them to an exhibition of the American style of journalism, including a Sunday edition. A newspaper is sued seven days in the week is something unheard of in England, and a sensation of course was caused in the metropolis. The Herald's London office is one of the best equipped establishments in Europe, and has all the conveniences necessary to the issuing of a great paper. The Herald now issues three editions simultaneous ly in the three great capitals of the world, New York, London and Paris. It has a special wire on the British Channel submarine line to Paris, and a correspondent in every important capital of the continent, with a large space devoted to news from the United States, as well as from other parts of the world. The distribution of the Sunday Herald the next new enterprise. Hundreds of cabs were employed, each of which time the entire city was supplied with the news. London never saw edition was exhausted. The Herald is a great paper, and this magnificent venture is another evidence of its enterprise and of its standing as the foremost journal of the world.
